Any one of these curves can be drawn to have four-pointic contact with a given curve at any point, and, if the curve be such that the pole of the osculating spiral (S) lie always on the radius vector, the locus of S will be the inverse of the given curve with respect to the origin. If the chord of curvature through the pole be kr , it will be found that $dp/ds = (k-1)\cot \angle OPY$ (when S lies on OP), whence $\frac{dp}{ds} = \frac{1}{k-1} \cot \angle OPY$, $3 = \frac{a^3}{r^3} \frac{A}{dp}$ will be the equation for a curve such that the locus of the pole of the osculating spiral is the inverse, with respect to the circle $r = A^2$, of the curve. If the constant term in this equation be omitted, it is the equation between r and p for the spiral. Perhaps the equation would be better, written in the form $r = \frac{A^2}{k-1}$...
