Excerpt: .purity of the family relation, and is the foundation of social and national welfare. It is supported by sound principles of physiology, by historical study of the rise and fall of nations, and by a consideration of the evils of our present age. The lessons of the past and present, our clearer knowledge of cause and effect, alike prove the wisdom of the highest religious teaching, viz., that the faithful union of strong and pure young manhood and womanhood is the only element out of which a strong and durable nation can grow. PART II. I Having ascertained the standard of morality which should be our guide in the education of youth, as shown by the laws of human physiology and social growth, another aspect of the question demands consideration. The present subject may be summed up in two great questions, viz.: First, is...
